41	Education and Professional Studies	Human Environmental Sciences	Course enrollment restriction change	FMCD	3313	Guidance of the Young Child		Return for answers.	Graduate enrollment is a 3000-level course? Is this common for a 3000-level course? Is there a specific reason? #8 Should read Human Dev/Family Sciences (wrong proposed name is currently listed)? #14 Do they not want secondy-year graduate students to have the option to take the course? Would they rather leave that as an option?
42	Education and Professional Studies	Human Environmental Sciences	Course enrollment restriction change	FMCD	3423	Aging and Adult Development		Return for answers.	Sophomore standing required. No prerequisite courses. How does this course meet regents' course-level criteria? Especially in light of being open to all majors?
43	Education and Professional Studies	Human Environmental Sciences	Course enrollment restriction change	FMCD	4002	Case Management		Return for answers.	This is a 4000-level course with no prerequisite courses? Open to sophomores? How does this course meet regents course-level criteria? Especially in light of being open to all majors? Serious concerns.

For a 4000-level course, this course will have one prerequisite course, FMCD 2213. From the course description, this is an intensive course. By removing the 9 hours of child development or 6 hours in a related field requirement and allowing sophomore students to take the course how will students be prepared to succeed? How does this course meet regents' course level criteria? Serious concerns.
